A River Flows

Rivers of life that swell from within
Submit yourself and be kissed by Him
Enter His arms of mercy and grace
Be filled with his glory in your secret place
Receive him, I beg you, deny him no more
For he covets your praise, yes its praise he adores
From the time before time, from then until now
He's desired to love you and reveal to you how
To walk in his power of courage and faith
To delve deeper in holiness, to wholly partake
Of wisdom and joy, of blessings divine
Of favor manifested in quenched areas of your life
Oh rivers of praise that flow from the heart
Bare thy soul, surrender and shun him not
Oh rivers of reverence arise and sing
Holy, Holy, Holy is the One True King
Blessings and honor and glory and praise
Be unto the Lamb, the Ancient of Days
I yield to you my breath and the confines of my soul
I surrender to you my all and every thing I hold
In you I will trust, in you I will stay
I'll rest on the promises your word conveys

That neither life, nor death, nor principality
Can deter or hinder the destiny you have for me
Yes, in you I will trust, in you do I boast
The King of Glory, the Maker of Heaven's Hosts
Oh rivers of life that cry out from within
Prostrate thyself and partake of Him
