Editors' Note

To begin, we would like to thank all of the students who submitted their papers to St. John Fisher College's Undergraduate Review. We would also like to congratulate those whose papers have been included in the Spring 2013 edition of Undergraduate Review and we believe that they accurately represent the outstanding academics of St. John Fisher College.

We received papers from a wide variety of academic disciplines, including Biology, Psychology, and Political Science, discussing topics including Seinfeld's relevance to economic theory, the underlying message presented in fairy tales, and the continued presence of gender bias in the workplace. The extensive amount of research and the dedication to excellence put into these papers is evident to every reader of the Undergraduate Review.

We have had a wonderful experience serving as the co-editors of the Undergraduate Review and we hope that you enjoy reading each of the selections that have been included in this issue.
