December 2008

My Crimson Friend

Thomas J. Jewel
St. John Fisher College

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?
Follow this and additional works at: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/verbum
Part of the Religion Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/verbum/vol6/iss1/8

This document is posted at http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/verbum/vol6/iss1/8 and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.
My Crimson Friend
My Crimson Friend

Across the sea of brown –
- reeds faded by the turn of Fall;
          Stands my friend.
Small in stature, relative to his brethren,
Yet large, and beautiful, in his diversity.
          Alone amidst the crowd.

Whose journey, at springs awakening,
          began as all the others.
Hard to distinguish at first glance.
Created to withstand the trials of time;
          bending when oft the wind blows
standing strong when the season demands
Yet, in his silent maturity, unafraid to turn at Autumn’s call
To be set apart
with clothes that shout, “Here I am!”
          Daring, if not proud, to be different.

What wisdom age sometimes brings.
          For some, it is destiny.
For my crimson friend it is but his nature.

Deacon Tom Jewell