*May our friendship
always know a tender bondage, that is forever kind in thought.*

WILLIAM HENRY, Jr.

Lonely Image

*I saw you through my own eyes
Where you stood watching the early morning garden
Where the flowers were so amiable and youthful
The precious creatures of yours.*

*You stood there long
Wind was chasing around
Your creatures orderly kneeled and then rose
You folded your hands
Your hair was neatly up*

You were still.

*I see you through my own mind
Where you stand watching the early morning garden
Where the ground is covered with flower petals
The lifeless creatures of yours.*

*You stand there
Wind was pushing around
Your creatures tumultuously blow and then fall
You open your hands to catch
Your hair is tangling in the wind*

You are busy.
