A Spot Of Time At Baron's Pond

Chris Tanner
St. John Fisher College

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?
Follow this and additional works at: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1989/iss1/32

This document is posted at http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1989/iss1/32 and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.
A Spot Of Time At Baron's Pond

Cover Page Footnote

This poem is available in The Angle: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1989/iss1/32
RAIN

The weather here is quite changeable.
The rain comes at the most unexpected times.
Even now, it slides down and rests quietly with the others
never alone.
Each drop is soon intermingled with the thousands that have come before.

It's grey
Cold too. Nature keeps us inside today.
She sets aside days like this for organizing.
Sometimes it takes longer
weeks
There are changes to be made. Decisions.
Where to put the couch. What color to paint the bathroom.
Sometimes you hint to a friend that you need a hand.
Some are too busy and cannot be bothered with someone else's petty tasks problems. While others are willing to help paint the bathroom.

Today is just one of those days
I just felt a drop.

Karen Marie Benz

“A Melancholy Accident”
(From Thoreau’s Walden)

A clean red trolley,
its smooth chrome and glass
gleaming thirsty in the sunlight.
The huddled few who wait
step aboard as brass is struck,
a gold bell chiming notes
that with the trolley are gone.
Humming quickly through the city, propelled by wires
that hang unseen above baggy pedestrians like an electric web.
The burdened wood crackles
as trolley rails shreik,
the sparking cables snap and fall
turning the travelling crowd to toast.

Jon Victor

“A Spot of Time” at Baron’s Pond

Perfect azure skies yield to the flaming western twilight silhouetting fragrant evergreens stretching lazy limbs over the breeze rippled water which tickles my ankles dangling from the weathered wooden dock to the winsome melody of two thousand spring peepers scattered among the swaying grasses cattails and shoreline lillies where an early largemouth explodes the calm surface in pursuit of dinner sending a flight of mallards carving a quick path across the pond’s surface-

-Senses sensing till they can sense no more,
I am lost in the evening’s
Thrilling still.

Chris Tanner

Published by Fisher Digital Publications, 1989