KERRY IVERS

The power of the wind
is demonstrated by the bending trees,
not by its whistling sound alone.

Unheard doesn't always mean unknown.

The rhythm of the rain
is clear with every silver droplet's splatter,
not only by its tapping sound.

In silence there's often much to be found.

The danger of the fire
is found in its burning heat,
not just in the noise of a crackling flame.

Sometimes words and sounds are too tame.

The passion of love
is shown by how we act,
not only by what we speak.

Without the actions to back them up, words are very weak.
