

2002

The Last Closing

Evelyn Jansen
St. John Fisher College

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?

Follow this and additional works at: <http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle>

 Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Jansen, Evelyn (2002) "The Last Closing," The Angle: Vol. 2003: Iss. 1, Article 20.
Available at: <http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol2003/iss1/20>

This document is posted at <http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol2003/iss1/20> and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.

The Last Closing

Abstract

In lieu of an abstract, below is the essay's first paragraph.

"As I closed and locked the door of my little country store for the last time, I could smell the foliage on that warm, balmy evening. After I turned the key in the lock, I stared at the weathered, white exterior of the building I had worked in for 27 years."

Cover Page Footnote

Appeared in the issue: Volume 3, Issue 1, 2002.

EVELYN JANSEN

THE LAST CLOSING

AFTER EDWARD HOPPER, SEVEN A.M., 1948

As I closed and locked the door of my little country store for the last time, I could smell the foliage on that warm, balmy evening. After I turned the key in the lock, I stared at the weathered, white exterior of the building I had worked in for 27 years.

I could hear birds in the trees next door-chirping like they didn't have a care in the world. What I used to hear was the door constantly opening and closing as customers came and went, and the ding of the old patina-colored cash register as I rang up transactions.

Lately though, all you could hear was my own breathing, and the only smell was of dust, settling on the empty shelves-chestnut in color. They line the walls of this store like soldiers ready to advance on a silent, but formidable enemy-hard times.

It has become pretty isolated around here since the factory shut down. I can't expect people to buy things in my store when most don't even have enough to eat.

All I can do now is draw the butter-cream shades, and lock the door.

MARICA DODGE

LIFE IS . . .

Life is rain

A warm misting that just gives you a small thrill
Gentle rain that fleetingly kisses you on its way by
The downpour that gets everything wet yet not enough to satisfy
A cold dark pelting that lasts awhile
An encompassing soothing rain calming and lulling you to sleep
Flashing thundering that holds your attention and puts on a show for those unafraid to go

ALEXIS SPECK