THE MOON AND ME

BY DILLON LYNN

I see you

The moon, screaming out of the vast, bleak autumn sky
It's light darting through shadows of the night
Into the seldom eyes electrified by its might

Clouds crouching, waiting, cautioned to impede on the elite
Moonlight; holding a firm grasp on the space for which
It lays and plays like the children who gaze and dance
At the glance of this sullen paradise

I am. It is. We are.
An infinite device of life
And of light.

THE SUN MELTS THE SNOW AWAY
