MIRROR CHILD

poetry by

MIKE WOLFE

I remember the white Christmas
And only the thought of receiving
I remember the sounds from the chimney
And constantly believing

I remember the classroom closets
Where I would hang my coat
I remember the class projects
And all the tales I wrote

I remember every birthday
When we had to clean the house
I remember all the toys and things
Oh! what joys they would arouse

I remember growing older Slowly though it seemed
Although everything else has changed
It's my youth that I've redeemed

For now I'm thinking, discontent
Remembering what these words represent Realizing how quickly time passes by
With crayons in my hand, and a twinkle in my eye.
