SAVE YOUR WORDS

poetry by

DILLON LYNN

Can't you see the world is breaking,
Shattering hearts fill up the night.
Before the heavens start their shaking,
Turn your head up to the light.

Walking on the summer side,
all you can see is the moon.
Watching the world swallow its pride
within its mother's womb.

Growing closer to the fall,
Down inside the blue birdcalls.
Save your words, the fire burns
within your hubris halls.
