Triptych

Joseph Deritis

St. John Fisher College

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?

Follow this and additional works at: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1961/iss1/5

This document is posted at http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1961/iss1/5 and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.
Triptych

Abstract

Cover Page Footnote
Appeared in the issue: Volume 6, Spring, 1961.

This poem is available in The Angle: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1961/iss1/5
TRIPTYCH: joseph deritis

TRANSITION

Behind distorted glass I peer, looking with difficulty through rain-mud cleaving irregularly to the pane in long ribbon-like strips.
The world I see is without color.
The time is neither winter nor brown-red-yellow-fall
but a nameless season,
a transitional time
possessing no thing
of beauty.
The heavy green of leaf is spent.
In place a pallid rust appears as brownish vine climbing
the backyard trellis.
 Turning from the window
I gently scan the ashen faces of persons in my house,
transfixed are the eyes,
speechless are the tongues.
FLIGHT

there is something in me that breaks out and leaps high like a silver flying fish and charges sun rays
and slips through quivering wafts of air
only to fall back into uncertain depths
of my self.

PICTURE OF MY FACE

I see striving in this pencil drawing of my face,
strong emotions reclining in penciled shadows.
Looking at this picture teaches me unkind secrets
of my self,
tells me stories of this willful heart,
fills me with wonderings of buried thoughts.
This picture is flat and gray,
existing in the vagueness of half-tones.
In it I see reflected something that is me,
and something that is the stranger.