Spring Vision

The black barked tree
Suddenly turned white;
Danced through the woods
With flowing laced gown
Pranced in the fields
Then quickly changed brown.

knotnuckles clutching the doorknob worn with more uncounted palmings young and old she tottered at his words and could only breathe toward the milkchild.

he was thin and brown as springirth, his eyes strange birdegg in a nest of face. he stood lying, so fragile he might rattle in his cuffs. she knew the need that cored him ending brutal in his lips, ragged in his hands. she saw the candywrapper shining from his pocket and slowly took from him the spare white liquid, spare because that morning's ransom half unsilvered in the transopause of some sweet sacrament. hen-gentle she held eyetight the quaking shells, reached the wrinkled evidence and placed it in a pain-poor pocket, as he had taken from her hand the glistenwet few coins of dawn into his.
that now lay soft and chocolate and stirring in his stomach.

eggs hatched quick glass birds; she palmed the victorian door between them.
the exhibit lay lifeless in one hand, the milk innocent in the other, growing warm. she wept from fulness: tears flocked beyond the door.
