to Christine

you look out a window and into another and you look out that window but you see another window this time and there’s always another window and if you look closely and can see through all that glass you can make out a vague image of a girl running

by Timon

There is a dark fear in me
That the brightest of our young ripe Pleasure cannot cure.

On those black nights
When I toss tired, sick, read wearily,
I fear that fast approaching sleep,

When I might meet
A tireless guardian
Whose towering self-righteous hand

Might not pause this time
To keep me where I am,
Or pass to let me in.

FRAN MURPHY

Easter 1966

The German found the body
And the Pope cancelled Easter
But the chocolate industry protested
So Hallmark made “Spring Bunny Day”
And Jesus never became the byword.

Other than that, the routine remained unbroken Except a few men stopped having children.

Night’s soft corners rock me, rock me Warm and dreamless in its arms.
And this earth
That cradles soft in crisp autumn
Sings dry of leaves, whispers in the still air, Heavy with the scent of soil, unfilled, waiting.
Oh my pale Christ, dimly lighting this land, Tracing across the sky every image,
Every rounded corner of this strange rest Yet never reflecting here my presence Give answer to my prayer. What is this night.
Burning so within me that my hands, warm,
Should press so eager in these quiet shadows
For secrets, long ago remembered,
And with each breath draw in such troubling love.
