The Angle

Volume 1969 | Issue 1

1969

The Song of the Nefarious Impure Knighte (or the wages of debauchary)

The Vagabond Scholar
St. John Fisher College

Follow this and additional works at: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?

Recommended Citation
Scholar, The Vagabond (1969) "The Song of the Nefarious Impure Knighte (or the wages of debauchary)," The Angle: Vol. 1969 : Iss. 1 , Article 23.
Available at: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1969/iss1/23

This document is posted at https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1969/iss1/23 and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.
The Song of the Nefarious Impure Knighte (or the wages of debauchary)

Cover Page Footnote
Appeared in the issue: Spring 1969.

This poem is available in The Angle: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1969/iss1/23
The mist hung on the autumn trees with rusty leaves and yellow.
The night receded endlessly beyond the rolling vapor;
The streetlamp’s light had filtered through the mist and softly settled on the road.
I heard my footsteps echo off the houses locked and curtained and I watched the woman walking enveloped now in darkness but emerging into sight as her silent shadow raced her past the lights.

I imagined that she smiled, that she hesitantly stopped me to ask for help in finding the hotel where she was staying.
I said I know the way, I’m staying there myself
I’ll walk with you if you don’t mind.
Nights like this are maddening when alone.
We talked of all the people and the things that were last summer
A deserted beach in Suffolk and a cabin in the Catskills.
We learned and loved and learned from that and spent the night together in her room.

But my mind had only wandered and I saw her there before me:
As I reached out in the darkness to touch her sweatered shoulder
she recoiled from my hand and faded into the midnite and I whispered to her asking why she walked the night
Alone

Victor Russell

The Song of the Nefarious Impure

Knighte (or the wages of debauchery)

A castle rose once bye the Sienne
With towers big and longe
And there with all his merrie menne
Lived Galahad the Strong Reknowne throughout the countrie he
For gallantrie not smalle
And thought without a doubt to be
The purest Knighte of alle

But being pure became a bore a little fun he craved and in a seven month or more
The prince was quite depraved
Wild feasts and orgies all he gave
In short— he had a balle
You’d never think that once he was
The Purest Knighte of alle

But a knock one day came at the door
’Twas his girlfriend
’Twas his girlfriend Fanny
She sayed (as tears felle to the floor)
“’I’m going to have a babie” “Marry me you must” sayed she
“The babie’s due in Fall”
Poor Galahad then wished he’d stayed
The Purest Knight of alle

The Knighte, my friends, took all the blame but punish mente was to be falle
They wed; and Fanny soon became Alas! Quite frigide after alle
And every nighte thereafter seemed
The Purest Night of alle

The Vagabond Scholar