Reflections Between Utica And Albany

Ed A. Wurtz
St. John Fisher College

Follow this and additional works at: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1970/iss2/4

This document is posted at https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1970/iss2/4 and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.
Reflections Between Utica And Albany

Cover Page Footnote
Appeared in the issue: Spring 1970.

This poem is available in The Angle: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1970/iss2/4
REFLECTIONS BETWEEN UTICA AND ALBANY

I hear America crying, in every seam of this shoddy coach in the rattle of the wheel on track I hear the lament of America.
I see America weeping, within the shacks and hovels of rural poverty in smoky, small industrial towns I taste her tears.
I sense America sobbing, in the furrowed faces on street corners in every dirty field in every once-clean stream
I see America convulse
I feel America’s anguish, of my riches in their poverty in the taught nerve of black and white I hear America moaning.
I see America hopeful, like the spring plowed field or the youthful face of a friend I feel America,
still a dream,
not yet a nightmare.

Ed A. Wurtz