August 16th

Don Blair

St. John Fisher College

Follow this and additional works at: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1986/iss1/14

This document is posted at https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1986/iss1/14 and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.
August 16th

Cover Page Footnote
Appeared in the issue: 1986.

This poem is available in The Angle: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1986/iss1/14
AUGUST 16th

It's a clear day
In Hiroshima

Lt. Ryan
Dreaming of his family back home
In western New York
Is content and at ease with his captors
Waiting for his liberation
Only months away
He thinks he will bring his family here some day

Soft ponds reflect the morning sky
Our city has been untouched
Air raid sirens sit silent
Monks worship the peace around us
As we gather for our daily exercises

People are active in their routines
Children working at their desks
Birds setting on electrical wires fly away
Saying goodbye to the flowers on the ground
Dissappearing beyond the smoke
Of a cranking munitions factory

Around a pastoral courtyard
A child waves to the strange stiff bird
Come to welcome her
Kiri-Tsubo is in the rock garden
Nursing her only child

Flash—

In the center
There is no sound
But thunder is heard miles away
Her child's lips have melted
Onto her breast
"Why are you eating me?", she asks

Orange and blue light
Piercing through the classroom window
Hands, hands
My hands are sculding
Fingers burning
Grasping for the sky
As flesh oozes to the ground

The river bank is crimson
Heads facing east
Their shadows remain burned into wood
Their bodies carried away
On sheets of tin

Faces painted black
We walk in silence
Skin is peeling
There is no panic
Only the stillness of death

Showers of dark blue rain
Form dops the size of marbles
Everything has fallen
Debris, destruction
Hell has come to earth
No faces, no eyes

Oh-God, oh-Buddha, oh-Harry Truman
Why have you done this to our city
Now an immense boiling tarpit
Under the cold cold sun

Don Blair
AUGUST 16th

It's a clear day
In Hiroshima

Lt. Ryan
Dreaming of his family back home
In western New York
Is content and at ease with his captors
Waiting for his liberation
Only months away
He thinks he will bring his family here some day

Soft ponds reflect the morning sky
Our city has been untouched
Air raid sirens sit silent
Monks worship the peace around us
As we gather for our daily exercises

People are active in their routines
Children working at their desks
Birds setting on electrical wires fly away
Saying goodbye to the flowers on the ground
Dissappearing beyond the smoke
Of a cranking munitions factory

Around a pastoral courtyard
A child waves to the strange stiff bird
Come to welcome her
Kiri-Tsubo is in the rock garden
Nursing her only child

Flash—

In the center
There is no sound
But thunder is heard miles away
Her child's lips have melted
Onto her breast
"Why are you eating me?", she asks

Orange and blue light
Piercing through the classroom window
Hands, hands
My hands are sculding
Fingers burning
Grasping for the sky
As flesh oozes to the ground

The river bank is crimson
Heads facing east
Their shadows remain burned into wood
Their bodies carried away
On sheets of tin

Faces painted black
We walk in silence
Skin is peeling
There is no panic
Only the stillness of death

Showers of dark blue rain
Form drops the size of marbles
Everything has fallen
Debris, destruction
Hell has come to earth
No faces, no eyes

Oh-God, oh-Buddha, oh-Harry Truman
Why have you done this to our city
Now an immense boiling tarpit
Under the cold cold sun

Don Blair

https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1986/iss1/14