Silent Tears

A twisted world of a rounded square you cut the corners but still run in circles.
The whisper of cries that echos through the chambers only heard by the cry of the beholder.
Trying to do right, it comes out all wrong you try to fight you see you’re not so strong.
What you want to be is so far beyond your reach, though the life which you desire dwells over you day and night.
Some ask why the game is so hard to play, some cheat to win, some try and lose, some do what’s wrong and dodge the right and end up in the rounded square running in circles with endless fear.
The silent tear rains like thunder all hear the call, but still some wonder.
