Paws

Mark Crowe
St. John Fisher College

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1998/iss1/17
Paws

Cover Page Footnote
Appeared in the issue: October 1997.

This poem is available in The Angle: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol1998/iss1/17

Paws

Thick, strong works
short stubby fingers

Callused, close at palm.

Soft slaps, spankings, squeezings active, useful,
moving, flare patterns, handball,
gardening, rich, experienced,
gentle tips, back rubs,
duck bites,
prayers.

--Mark Crowe

Labors

Swinging the anvil
tore his muscles taut.
The beads of sweat streamed down toward his navel like nectar.
Tanned skin stretching over the meaty arms
and a strong back made of a hard day's work.
His hair was golden - the son of a farmer - with brown chestnut eyes reflecting his mother's sweet potato pies.
A line in the forehead
drawn from burying
a small child
with the same eyes.
He swings the anvil
in one long sweep -

enough power to crush
the life from a man.
Callused leathery hands

That so often caressed
my cheek, my neck, my breast.
Each day I wish that I might swing that anvil
for him -

ease the ache in his back, soften his callused hands
like the way he lays me down at night and gives me life, gives me breath.

--Cassandara Dings