LETTER FROM THE EDITORS

A new year has arrived, blowing in not only drifts of snow, but new frustrations, fears, and hopes. Here at The Angle, the New Year has also brought changes to our staff and our publication. We have extended our magazine to the web with an innovative Web site that captures The Angle's mission and creative works. We are confident that this will be a great addition to the magazine. In addition, Stacy Colombo joins us as the next editor-in-training and will be working with Jodi Rowland as co-editor of The Angle in Fall, 2003.

This issue, in particular, deals with emotional and thought-provoking topics. With the new uncertainties that are plaguing personal and world relations, it is important that we provide writers with a voice and our readers with different viewpoints. We believe this promotes free expression of ideas, whether or not The Angle staff agrees with all the ideas published within this magazine.

We hope that you will continue to find The Angle an expressive, creative platform. We promise to present the best talent that resides in this college community. The next Angle deadline is March 31st, and we encourage you to submit your artwork, poetry, and prose.

Thank you,

Mindae M. Kadous, Editor
