When You Say When

Meghan Prichard

St. John Fisher College

Follow this and additional works at: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?

Recommended Citation

This document is posted at https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol2007/iss4/6 and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.
When You Say When

Cover Page Footnote

This poem is available in The Angle: https://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol2007/iss4/6
You say, “This city is turning into Seattle.”
I watch your beard brush through breakfast crumbs.
Your nephew is cooing in the bathtub with only flippers on.
My face is mirrored in every doorway,
in glass that should be ground.
The hallway, dark as I approach –
A gibbous gleams with background baby sound.
Every lullaby my father ever sung is in my head.
It’s in my head right now.

When I come in to the kitchen
he is there,
all banana and rolling thighs.
His four teeth are at your fingers.
His brand new face is on my eyes.

I look into your glasses,
past the scratches on each lens –
and miss your lips, when you tell me this.
“Love me. Wait ‘til I say when.”