Thursday

Mark Overmyer
St. John Fisher College

How has open access to Fisher Digital Publications benefited you?

Follow this and additional works at: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol2008/iss1/5

This document is posted at http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol2008/iss1/5 and is brought to you for free and open access by Fisher Digital Publications at St. John Fisher College. For more information, please contact fisherpub@sjfc.edu.
Thursday

Cover Page Footnote

This poem is available in The Angle: http://fisherpub.sjfc.edu/angle/vol2008/iss1/5
THURSDAY

BY MARK OVERMYER

Bourbon and shaving cream
make a perfume when mixed that has come to define the end of my thursday nights.

For they all end the same
naked, lathered, and drunk,
razor held loose in right
glass of two melting cubes left.

I try to imagine how I’ll
look after a good shave.
Where to start? Beard?
Moustache? Head? Crotch?

Ultimately I decide on the arms, and rinse, lather, and bring the razor down.
Several swift strokes, voila!

No blood, no chafe, but a whole new arm. Bronzed and muscular.
chiseled from white stone,
it glistens with an oiled sheen.

So impressed I move on,
now with a drunk fury, an unhinged stupor, I prepare the flesh, and hack away

other arm, right leg, left leg, groin, and ass. Finally torso, even the back, all that’s left is the face.

I hesitate as I glare into the mirror speckled with water and lather, dusted,
a 50’s era sundress.
My eyes flare, green orbs that dart about, using the mirror to reexamine every contour—every square inch.

My scars are neighbors the pores old friends, every whisker a lover, along with every last hair on my head.

I set the razor down, once again naked and drunk, is that how I would look? I rinse my face and go to bed.